

Temple Riders Association Policy on Endurance Rides
This Statement of Policy is posted on the TRA Website for the benefit of the TRA Membership.
Amended and updated June 2021

“Iron Butt” rides, or any other endurance type rides, are not sanctioned by the Temple Riders Association because of the potential risks involved, nor should the TRA media be used to advertise such rides.

What individual members of the TRA do and how they ride when not riding under the banner of the TRA is their own personal business. However, it should be clearly understood that the TRA leadership and/or the Temple Riders Association, per se, do not in any way endorse, sponsor or support endurance type rides and will not accept any responsibility or liability that may arise out of participation in these kinds of rides.

We also request that all TRA ride sponsors become familiar with the safety measures promulgated by the Motorcycle Safety Foundation and encourage all participants to observe posted speed limits and to comply with prudent safety measures at all times.

This statement is not intended to be judgmental - only to define the TRA policy pertaining to rides or activities that may encourage riders to exceed their own personal physical limitations.
